MIDDLEBURY COLLEGE.

THE

KALEIDOSCOPE,

1877-78.

Published by the Senior Class.

VOLUME V.

RUTLAND:
TUTTLE & COMPANY, PRINTERS.
1877.
Once more the time for publishing the yearly issue of the Kaleidoscope has arrived. We hope that the Kaleidoscope of '78 will meet the expectations of its many friends.

Our main purpose has been utility. But while it contains all information that it has formerly contained, it also contains that which we hope will make it more interesting to those who are separated from our "Alma Mater," by reminding them of the pleasures of their college course.

Animated by the spirit that has animated us in the past, to do our duty, we take pleasure in presenting to you this issue of the Kaleidoscope.

SUMMER VACATION OF TEN WEEKS.

Sept. 12th.—Fall Term begins—Thursday.
Did you ever, in company with merry friends, attempt the ascent of a lofty mountain? So tall and steep its rugged sides you are at first almost discouraged, and the more so perhaps as some less spirited friend faints at the road side ere you have fairly begun your journey. But you press steadily on unmindful of the discouraging words of your less courageous mates. And at last, as you reach the summit, you are invigorated with new energy, new zeal, and are possessed with the pleasure of success and the hope of a long rest at the top.

We have been climbing a mountain and now, as we near its summit, we feel the pleasure of a successful attempt and are more anxious than ever to view the prospect which awaits us at the top. Seven years ago we commenced our classical course. Many were the hopeful ones who started out at our side. But the path was too rugged for some; some were led away by bright prospects in other pursuits; some attracted by other paths left us at different points in our journey; and some, perhaps our most intimate friends, were called away by death. At last we reached the "Halfway House," but our stay there was short and soon we entered upon our College course. Fairly started again, we find our band to consist of only fifteen, yet all so valiant and hopeful that we are sure that none will leave us now. But, alas, one after another is called from our ranks to seek his fortune in other paths, and one has died. Oh, that was a sad day when we bore him to his last resting place! Sad were our thoughts and meditations when we returned that night from the distant town! But now we are very near our journey's end, and even at this time we can almost see the high mountain of Fame which still remains for us to climb. In a few short months we shall leave the classic walls of our beloved Alma Mater. Soon we shall separate—each to take a different path up the mountain, now only vaguely seen in the distance. But the thought of separation is a sad one—especially as we look back over the last three years which have passed so pleasantly. How little do we seem to have appreciated the past! And now, as we near the end of our course, we are forcibly reminded of those words of the poet:

"We are standing at life's portal
Waiting for the door to ope,
Only ten, yet all immortal
In our strength of faith and hope.
While with youthful ardor pressing
Through life's morn so pure and bright,
We are learning that each blessing
Brightens as it takes its flight."
Two years have passed swiftly away, and as the halls of our Alma Mater again re-echo the voices of her children, it is with hearts full of ambition and firm with resolve that we attempt to finish our journey.

It is good to be a Junior, to be done with the ribaldry and deviltry of Sophomore year. We feel that our shoulders are broadening to sustain the responsibilities which are daily accumulating. With eager expectation and manly zeal we look forward to our work.

To us, indeed, "A life without literature is death." We have been brought under the influences of the master minds of the past. We have revelled in the glories of the heroes of Homer. We have been touched by the sad pathos of Euripides, and have admired his bold delineations of character. We have laughed at the jokes of Aristophanes and have been thrilled by the grandeur of Cicero. And now, with the thoughts of the grand old masters of the past fresh in our memories, we turn to the light of modern genius. As the field of science and literature broadens before our gaze, it is with hearts bursting with the desire of knowledge that we bend to our task.

Oh! "'79!" Bright is thy star! The magi of the East, attracted by thy brilliancy, bring offerings to thine altars. As the years roll by, with swelling ranks thy votaries, imbued with thy majesty and power, flock round thy shrine, and inspired by thy divine oracles go forth to their life's work.
Sophomore Class.

'SO.

"Quamquam cognosci et si tamen nunquam dicitur."

Hurrah for '80," has been the proud and exulting cry which has resounded through the old halls during the months that have advanced us into Sophomoric dignity and glory,—a cry which, we hope, shall echo there long after the voices that awakened it have gone forth to battle in the world,—an echo whose reverberations we trust to hear when the struggle of life is drawing to its close, and we wander dreamily through the old halls once more. Yet, '80 has not merely awakened an echo; she has won in a year what lives have labored for in vain,—a reputation. They say that '80 is the "wickedest class" for many years back; old heads shake slowly at thinking what these boys are coming to. But we glory in our reputation! Youthful blood must have its sway ere calm manhood succeeds. We leave the model boys of '81 to be the pet of sober minds; pet them into puny manhood, if you will.

As Freshmen we have fought nobly in resistance of tyranny, and, as Sophomores, in suppression of rebellion. Dignified '78 and '79 would have had us stake, with '81, established customs upon one pitched battle. We feel for the upper classmen in their loss of such an edifying spectacle, and we pity '81 that she could not have attained Sophomoric privileges at a single blow. We have made the Freshmen quake in their beds at the crash of the horn, and have aroused the old Campus in the silence of midnight with the wild and parting cheers for "The Duke." Then how wily thou wert, O '80, in thy vain shrewdness, to stop the wrong key-holes or leave the doors unlocked! We, such was our reputation for noble qualities, were honored by '79 in assisting at the cremation of their departed Greek. But one glory suggests another, and we must forbear, trusting that the reader may with ease imagine the rest. Honor be to '80 for what she has accomplished! Glory be to '80 for what she shall accomplish!
The powerful hand of the faculty hangs threatening over us as we arise shaking in our boots to make the usual Freshman bow. We dare not make our little speech with that spirit and enthusiasm which would lend aid under other circumstances; but, if the issue of the present crisis proves favorable, we feel that pleasant anticipations may be indulged in for our four years’ struggle.

It is needless to repeat here those records of our victories over the class of ’80, with which we have been extolled by the press throughout the land. Suffice it to say, the mightiest of the struggles are over and past, without bloodshed and with no dissolution of the ties which bind us in that friendship which collegians alone can feel.

Of course we shall always pity them somewhat, and our hearts will be moved with compassion when we recall their lack of manliness, but we realize that

“To err is human,

To forgive divine;”

And, like true men, seize the opportunity which is given us to forgive. And now we bid the world at large but a temporary good bye, for we make the assertion confidently that you will hear from us again.

Terms of Admission.

For admission to the Freshman Class, candidates are examined in the following studies:

Latin Grammar, including the Rules of Prosody and Scanning; Caesar's Commentaries, four books, or Sallust's Conspiracy of Catiline; Cicero, six orations, including the four against Catiline; Virgil, the Bucolics, and six books of the Æneid; Arnold's Latin Prose Composition, to the VIIth Chapter.

Greek Grammar; Xenophon's Anabasis, three books; Homer's Iliad, two books.

Ancient and Modern Geography.

Arithmetic; Algebra, through Quadratic Equations; and three books of Loomis' Geometry.

Real equivalents will be accepted in place of any of the Latin or Greek authors named above.

A thorough familiarity with the elements of the Latin and the Greek Grammars is an indispensable requirement for admission.

Students may be admitted to an advanced standing, provided that, in addition to the requisites for admission to the Freshman Class, they are found, on examination, thoroughly acquainted with the several studies of the class which they propose to join. Candidates for such standing should, however, be informed that in consequence of the thorough discipline of the first College year, and the exactness of knowledge which is required of classes, no one can hope, if admitted, to maintain a respectable standing, unless he comes with a high degree of previous preparation. Indeed, it is highly important to the unity and completeness of a liberal education, that the students should enter College at the commencement of the course. The disadvantages incurred by those who postpone an entrance to a later period are much more serious than is commonly supposed.

Every student admitted to an advanced standing (with the exception of those who come from other colleges), is required to pay a fee of $5.00, if he enters after the expiration of the Fall Term of the Freshman year; and of $10.00, if after the expiration of the Fall Term of the Sophomore year.

Candidates for admission must bring a certificate of good moral character; and, if from another college, of their regular dismissal and good standing. When a young man has been examined and admitted to college, he is required to attend the prescribed exercises, and is subject to the laws of the Institution.

The trouble that Paris the Trojan made
Among the Greeks was weighty;
But plaster of Paris more has made
Among the class of '80.
TUESDAY, OCTOBER 2nd, 1877.
* '81 carries its "Class Cane."

"There was a sound of 'deviltry' by night,
And Eighty's Class had gathered there
Her strong and mighty." * * * "Did ye not hear it?"

* This cane (if such it be) is a "Class Cane," because all the class are required to carry it.—Artist.
Within these classic walls a Noble comes,
With blast of bugle loud and roll of drums,
Not like the groaning "Horse" of former years
Brings forth the "Freshie's" laugh and not his tears,
But sending forth his voice in tones of thunder
Tells to the Freshman in his bed or under,
That through the coming year he must obey,
And subject be to Sophomoric sway.
While lying there in agony and fear,
He tremblingly doth drop a silent tear,
And wonders why in foolishness he came
To quake and tremble there in fright and shame.—
Long may our glorious Duke continue here,
To wake the echoes each alternate year,
Within these walls replete with classic lore,
Till "Eighty" and "M. C." shall be no more.
